

Norwich University honors veterans

Northfield, Vermont - November 9, 2010

Norwich University celebrated America's veterans from past and current wars Tuesday.

Norwich holds its annual Veteran's Day ceremony before the official holiday. Cadets pay tribute to those who have served in all 18 of America's conflicts.

Some special guests were in attendance Tuesday. The Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Massachusetts is the country's oldest military organization, and 30 of its current members are Norwich grads.

"Ah, a great honor. It's not the first time the group has been invited back, but every time is just as, just a warm and tingly and very, how would you say, very patriotic day," said Joseph Milano, a Norwich alumnus.

Veterans Day is Thursday. There will be several ceremonies across the state including the unveiling of a brand new memorial in Randolph.
